YVBSG Events For Your Diary

South Yorkshire Vernacular & Rotherham's Best Buildings

Saturday 13 October 2018

After last year's successful autumn day school event, when we promoted our review day more widely, we have decided to do this again. Our usual venue at Leeds Beckett University was not available to us so we have decided to hold it at the Showroom Cinema in the centre of Sheffield, just a few minutes' walk from the railway station; this is more convenient for the owners of the buildings we recorded to attend. This is an excellent venue used by South Yorkshire Archaeology Service for their annual day schools. It was only available for the morning until 12.30pm, giving us just five half-hour slots, sufficient time for our team leaders to talk about the five carefully chosen buildings reflecting different periods that were recorded at our earlier Rotherham recording weekend held in May, as outlined in the booking form enclosed with this Newsheet

Recording Bramley Grange, Rotherham

In addition we offer a buffet lunch in the fifteenth century timber-framed building in The Ponds - The Old Queen's Head - that gives an opportunity to have a close inspection of this superbly restored Tudor building (theoldqueenshead.co.uk).

After that, I will lead a walk to the Butcher Works on Arundel Street (Arundel Lane car park is at the junction with Charles Street, so if you come by car, you might wish to park here) a Grade II* listed building (and a short walk downhill to The Showroom and the station); we will have a good hour before it closes at 4pm. It is a restored cutlery and grinding workshop built in 1835 and 1875 set within its own courtyard and located within Sheffield's Cultural Industries Quarter (CIQ). The ground floor has been carefully restored to create an exhibition space, a superb organic café and artist and craft workshops. The Gallery exhibits and sells high quality craft work as do the six Makers who welcome visitors to see how things are made in their own workshops; be prepared to part with some money - I promise you will be tempted! The Academy of Makers is a partner of Freeman College and the Ruskin Mill Educational Trust. They have recently opened their own organic bakery, and the Fusion Café may provide a welcome drink before your departure.

Please come and support this initiative and see something of Sheffield where we are hoping to record buildings in its district next year. For further information, search on the web for 'Sheffield Cultural Industries Quarter Townscape Heritage Initiative', and 'Butchers Wheel, Sheffield'.

Report on recent events

Walks in the Dunsop Bridge area

On a drizzly morning on 16 June 2018, fifteen members met in Dunsop Bridge, travelling from as far as Leeds, York, and Lytham. Illness and a car breakdown prevented another four from coming. This was our eighth visit to the Forest of Bowland including three Slaidburn events in 2006-7. In the morning we visited three United Utilities farms in the civil parish of Bowland Forest High, then after lunch four farmhouses in Bowland Forest Low, the first three on the Duchy of Lancaster's Whitewell Estate. Most are busy working farms. All except Sykes were listed in 1983 (two in 1954).

The unlisted whitewashed Sykes Farm on Trough Road has decorative doorheads of 1692 and 1687, and a 1704 datestone, all reset in the farm buildings. All three have the letter 'P' for Parkinson. The current occupants have farmed 2,500 acres here since 1970.

Hareden Farmhouse is a three-unit house dated 1690 W.H on the battlemented doorhead, which has three flattened ogees. This type, more often seen west of Clitheroe and Slaidburn, is very common around Lancaster and then north to Furness. The resident family have been here since the 1930s, farming about 2,000 acres. Nearby, the late seventeenth century farmhouse known as Hareden Cottage is a two-unit linear house not unlike a laithe-house. The triangular lintel has an incised cross. We saw a similar cross on a wooden lintel inside Causeway Farm on the de Hoghton Estate in October 2013 (see Newsheet No 74).

After lunch we travelled south to Burholme Bridge, then a walk in heavy rain to Burholme Farm, now surrounded by scaffolding. The whitewash has been removed because of a damp problem, part of a ten-week restoration. A much altered seventeenth century house, refenestrated in the late eighteenth century, but early remains include a doorway with false four-centred arched lintel, and a large extruded gable chimney stack. The barn has some inscribed stones, including a small datestone dated T.S 1619 (Thomas Swinhulhurst) and a reset seventeenth century mullion window.

Lower Lees Farmhouse

Stepping stones leading to Stakes

When we reached Stakes (Grade II*) the rain was torrential. Some used the stepping stones to cross the river Hodder, others drove to the farm. The blocked north doorway of the T-shaped house has a Latin inscription over the 'three-ogees' lintel, which has had the date and letters chiselled off (see Newsheet No 92). But this doorway was dated 1681, according to the Provisional List of 1949. The farmer then invited us into the pantry to see a large oval sandstone slate 'table' measuring 62 x 82 inches, supported on a brick base. Then a dog-legged, three-flight staircase, and a large segmental arch fireplace. The house dates from the early seventeenth century (list description), or late seventeenth century (Pevsner). Yeoman farmer Henry Richmond (d. 1646) built the present house. Could his initials have been on the north doorway? There were ten hearths in 1664, making it the largest house in that part of Bowland. This number of hearths and two decorated doorheads reset in the barn suggests that Stakes was once bigger than it is now. There is a straight joint between the second and third bays of the long west wall of the cross-wing; the window openings are also higher. The occupants have been here more than fifty years, and also have Greenland Farm. Since the visit we have found six more similar Latin inscriptions; two of these are near Halifax, including one on a very large three-storey seventeenth century house. There are two more in Germany.

The whitewashed Lower Lees Farmhouse is a two-unit house with central entry plan. The doorway has another Hareden-type lintel dated 1678 A.E.R (Rathmell family). The drip-mould extends to the left over a blank wall as if there was a blocked fire-window below. The right-hand gable wall has a corbelled chimney stack. Graham Robinson has farmed here for twenty years. Finally, the partly rebuilt Lees House Farmhouse has a doorhead with three recessed arches and a panel above dated 1678 R.B for Robert Bleasdale (see Newsheet No 91). A fireplace lintel is dated 1718 R.B. Another six doorheads with three arches have been recorded so far.

The W John Smith archive

Items from the late W John Smith Collection stored in a garage near Stockport for many years are now in the Hebden Bridge area (Blackshaw Head). This collection includes black-and-white prints of buildings in Lancashire and Yorkshire taken from the 1950s onwards (some taken by the late Ralph Cross), not all are identified; 120 Gothic slides, plans, negatives, maps, research and lecture notes, surveys of vernacular buildings, and Slaidburn Estate items.

See Newsheet No 47 (February 2007) for information about W John Smith's very large collection that was donated to the newly-formed North West Traditional Buildings Trust. See also two articles in Newsheet No 84 (May 2016) for more information about former YVBSG member W John Smith and NWTBT, when some 2,200 black and white prints were acquired by the Trust.

Publications

Recording Timber-framed Buildings: an illustrated glossary by N W Alcock, M W Barley, P W Dixon and R A Meeson (1989). This invaluable little book has just been reprinted and is once again available at £8 from the CBA (shop.britarch.ac.uk).

From its status as a major coal mining centre in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries to its current role as the capital of Yorkshire's so-called 'Rhubarb Triangle', Wakefield has a proud and distinctive identity. This extraordinary history is embodied in the buildings that have shaped the town. This book explores the history of this rich and vibrant community through a selection of its greatest architectural treasures, from the Anglo-Saxon Grade I listed cathedral to the acclaimed Hepworth Wakefield art gallery, which opened in 2011. ## Yorkshire in the 1840s

John Bibby is planning a meeting in York in spring 2019 to cover the 1840s in York and Yorkshire. This was a pivotal decade for York and its hinterland. The focus is particularly on 1844, which is 175 years ago next year. The idea is to get lots of 10-minute speakers on topics focusing on this region and timeframe, thus stimulating intellectual and personal links.

John is currently assessing interest in this. Please email him at jb43@york.ac.uk if you wish to be kept informed. He would particularly like to hear from people who could offer a 10-20 minute poster or presentation on a relevant theme. You can also ring him on 01904 330334.
